Codex Resta, fol. 1

Provenance:

Codice Resta sent to Palermo by Fra Sebastiano Resta in 1689 at the request of Giuseppe Del Voglia, oratoriano of the Filippini di Palermo; after Voglia's death in 1705 the album likely remained in the library of the Oratoriani monks; no certain date for its entry into the collection of the Biblioteca Comunale (recording of acquisitions beginning in 1907); catalogue of 1855 records the album already as part of the Biblioteca holdings; annotations suggest it may have entered the collection as early as 1813.

From 1875 located in the Casa Professa dei Gesuiti when the biblioteca comunale occupied this residence; later to become the Biblioteca comunale "Leonardo Sciascia"; manuscript rediscovered in the early twentieth century (previously miscatalogued within the print collection).

In the collection of Leonello Pio da Carpi from 1518; acquired in 1564 from the estate of his son, Cardinal Rodolfo Pio da Carpi by Cardinal Alessandro Farnese, Rome; before 1680 Palazzo del Giardino, Palazzo della Pilotta, Parma; Ducale Galleria before 1708 and until 1734; Carlo di Borbone, Naples, before 1765; Ferdinando I di Borbone, Palermo; Reale Museo Barbonico, Naples, before 1821; Museo Nazionale Montecassino, Abbazia, 1943; transferred to Spoleto prior to February 1944; Germany 1943-45; 1947 taken to Rome and displayed at the Farnesina; Museo Nazionale Naples, from 1957.

In June 1940 due to advance of Allied troops, the painting was packed and transferred to the Abbazia di Mercogliano on orders of the Ministry of National Education, and in 1943 transferred to the Abbazia at Montecassino. Prior to the bombing of Montecassino in 15 February 1944, the painting was transferred to Spoleto. From there shipped to Germany, probably destined to the Linz Fuhrermuseum in Austria and to Goring's private collection; towards the end of the war transferred to Altaussee salt mines and then recovered by American forces and transported to Munich. Taken to Rome in 1947 where displayed at the Farnesina in an exhibition of recovered works, and later returned to Naples where it was publicly displayed for the first time from 5 May 1957 (see Piscitello 2015, pp. 41-43).
